

Journey up north

About 2 years ago, I went to Fort William with my Uncle Joe. We got the Citylink bus from Buchanan Street. It took 3 hours to get there.

We stopped for a break for twenty minutes and then went up to Fort William. We walked about Fort William.

The weather was a bit cold because we were up north. Joe sat on a bench. It had a tin man statue. He put his arm around it and put a roll up in its mouth.

I took a photo of him with my camera. Then we went into a pub for dinner. We had steak pie, chips and vegetables and a drink with our dinner and then we walked about the town centre.

It was good to explore somewhere different. We had a really good day out. We got the last bus home and it took us 3 hours to get back into Glasgow. I would like to go back to Fort William for another day out.
